Backer, who had previously forfeited his respect of all his former acquaintances as a man, has most assuredly forfeited also his reputation as a soldier by his ignominious surrender at Fort Donelson. The ground there was of rebellion; it was strongly fortified by the most efficient cannon; it was thoroughly manned, and so defended by able and stocky soldiers that but one Union regiment could advance to the attack at a time, it had been proudly designated as the Gibraltar of the West. It could defend itself against thousands of troops, and it was a most successful one hundred thousand "Yankees." Why was not this impregnable fortress surrendered early on Sunday morning, when Backer in his letter to Gen. Grant boasted of his brilliant success on the previous day? Floyd and Pillow, it is true, had deserted him, with part of the defending garrison, but he had thirteen to fifteen thousand still under his command. The Union forces had occupied but one portion of the rebel works at sundown on Saturday, and yet Backer gave the order to display the white flag on the main fort early on Sunday and not in the intermedium. Does not this look like showing the white feather? Had he been animated by the same holy patriotism which sustained Major Anderson and his small force in Fort Sumpter against overwhelming odds, he never would have surrendered until his fort was in flames and his thousands of troops totally exhausted. It must not be forgotten that this capitulation was planned by Backer without the knowledge of his men, who were much surprised when they saw the flag of surrender hoisted in the first grey of that glorious Sabbath morning. There is but one solution to this apparently intractable affair. The heart of the rebel was paralyzed with fear and his mind was palsied with the consciousness that he was fighting in an unholy cause, and that the might of an insubstantial country was bearing down upon him to crush him to the earth. He cannot escape the imputation that he was even to the bad command and exposed as he was traitor to the patriot cause he had deserted. To all the catalogue of damning sins which history must attach to the name of Backer must now be added that of cowardice. None of his prototypes in infamy ever reached this degradation. Judas Iscariot dared to hang himself, and Benedict Arnold fought bravely against the patriot cause he had attempted to ruin by his treachery.

Backer's conduct in the surrender admits of no vindication. He had plenty of ammunition, plenty of men, and all the advantages of the command. Backer and his men, we say, had plenty of men, and he had 15,000 men reinforced by a whole night's rest. One would have expected this number to be enough to defend such a stronghold as Donelson against any force that could be brought around it. According to rebel accounts, only 400 of the rebel troops had been killed, less than one in fifty, and yet in the early morning Backer's flag flew to a pallid white, and he surrendered his entire force without firing a gun. It was the deed of a poltroon. A brave man would sooner have leaped into the bottomless pit, Backer, it seems, did not flinch at the prospect of a defeat, but he flinched at the prospect of a loss. It appears from what he said of the "change of commanders" in his letter of capitulation, that the rebel forces, so long as the fighting was going on, were under the command of Floyd or Pillow. As given up the command devolved on Backer, "give up" was the word.

"I tell you," said a professional gentleman of this city to us a few months ago, "Backer is a coward." We asked our old friend the ground of his opinion. "I have," said he, "a hypothesis, my course well. I know he is a hypocrite and a coward, and no such man ever was or ever will be. Remember my words, sir, if ever Simon Backer is brought to the test, he will show himself an ardent coward."

Our neighbor of the Democrat, speaking of the prisoners taken at Fort Donelson, says: "If their defeat, they are willing to return to their allegiance, we are willing to let bygones be bygones, and only hold the leaders responsible." We presume this can hardly mean, that if the prisoners are willing to take the oath of allegiance, they should be discharged from confinement. A forcible article in a late number of the Democrat would seem to discountenance very strongly any such ill-considered leniency. What may become expedient after a time of course it can probably tell. At present, let us not be misled by the disingenuousness of the disaffected, and let us not be misled by the disingenuousness of the disaffected, and let us not be misled by the disingenuousness of the disaffected.

About three months ago, Gen. Backer sent word by one of our citizens to Mr. Guthrie to be very careful how he talked in Wash. Spradling's barbershop. And the Louisville Courier gave Mr. G. a similar warning in regard to talking in his shop. We cannot but be distinguished fellow-citizens and other Union men that recent events guarantee them the freedom of the barbershop of the city.

If Backer & Co. assumed, more than a hundred miles off, to exercise a despotism over the talk in the Louisville barbershops, would they probably have done so or undertaken to do if they had got here?

The Confederates made immense preparations to defend Bowling Green and abandoned it without firing a gun. They constructed formidable fortifications for the defense of Clarksville and evacuated it without burning a grain of powder. They built tremendous works for the defense of Columbus, and, according to recent intelligence, have not even awaited the approach of the Federal troops.

The Confederates beat the world in making military fortifications to run away from. The truth is, they exhaust their whole military talent and energy in the construction and have none left for the defense.

The sympathizers with rebellion in our midst are sneering at the Fort Donelson victory because the Union forces largely outnumbered the beleaguered rebels under Backer. They had no thought how "ungenerous and uncharitable" it was in them last April, when they shouted and rejoiced over the surrender of the gallant Anderson and his handful of men at Fort Sumpter, to ten or twelve thousand rebels, after a more stout resistance than Backer showed with his fifteen thousand at Fort Donelson.

It is now said that Backer at Fort Donelson was to be prepared for any turn of fortune, had a couple of flags tied to opposite ends of a long pole, a coat stolen from a neighboring farmer for a black flag, and a skin stolen from his wife for a white one. While the Federals kept at a distance from him, he displayed the coat of his flagstaff, but, as they approached, he shifted.

The question has often been asked how long the rebellion can live after in terrible disaster at Fort Donelson. A snake whose head is cut off in the morning moves his tail till sunset, and a decapitated terrapin lives nine days. It must be decided by the event whether the rebellion is a snake or a terrapin
